

Local Support

You can study the MSc in Professional Accountancy and the Postgraduate Certificate in Professional Accountancy anywhere in the world as a web-supported learner. However, you may also have the option to enrol instead with a local teaching institution for face-to-face support.

- We formally recognise institutions that offer study support to students of the University of London International Programmes through our Teaching Institutions Recognition Framework (TIRF). These are known as recognised centres and have been awarded either Affiliate or Registered Centre status. For more details, please refer to the following link: londoninternational.ac.uk/online-search/institutions

- The fees you pay to the University of London cover your admission, registration, study materials and examinations. If you choose to supplement your University of London studies, you will also have to pay fees to the institution. The University of London has no part in the fees charged by an institution. Any financial arrangement you make with an institution is entirely your own responsibility. The University will not become involved in the event of any financial dispute you may have with an institution. For further information, please visit londoninternational.ac.uk/teaching-institutions

The following institutions will be offering tuition support for the MSc in Professional Accountancy and the Postgraduate Certificate in Professional Accountancy. You must check directly that your chosen Institution is able to provide support for you in the January and/or the July study session.
