Sustainability is key to business investability & resilience today

More investors and other stakeholders are expecting companies to address and communicate their sustainability risks and opportunities like never before. Sustainable companies are better positioned at staying competitive and profitable as well as to attract funds.

We invite you to participate in the ACCA MaSRA 2016, the longest running awards that recognises those organisations which report and disclose material economic, environmental and social information in line with sustainability reporting frameworks.

The aims of these Awards are:

- to encourage the uptake of sustainability reporting
- to give recognition to those organisations which report and disclose economic, environmental and social information in line with sustainability reporting framework
- to raise awareness of corporate transparency issues.

Last year, we emphasised on the core elements of sustainability reporting - environmental, economic and social – and rewarding organisations that has integrated these core elements into each component of its value chain and strategies to ensure a more sustainable and inclusive growth of the organisation without compromising environment or jeopardising integrity and the needs of future generations. Organisation should make sustainability parts of its corporate DNA.

This year, we would like to continue imparting these core elements while injecting the principles and frameworks of governance, materiality and stakeholder engagements as laid out in Bursa Malaysia's new listing requirements and guidelines introduced end of 2016.

The award categories for ACCA MaSRA 2015 include:

- Best Sustainability Report
- Best First-Time Standalone Sustainability Report
- Best Sustainability Reporting in SMEs
- Best Reporting within an Annual Report
- Best Workplace Practices

During the judging process, judges may recommend additional awards categories this year.
